ABSTRACT

The scope of this diploma thesis is the analysis of the latest data on the compensation of residential houses and building lost, as well as the developments in the Construction Industry in Greece, taking into account the effects of the health and economic crisis and, at the same time, examining its role in halting the recession by the reduction of unemployment and the rapid recovery of the Greek economy. The thesis examines the potential contribution of the Construction Industry to the new environment in relation with the priorities of the national development strategy and analyzes the obstacles and distortions that may affect it. The scope is to determine the necessary interventions, both short-term and medium-term, to immediately strengthen the contribution of the Construction Industry to the Greek economy in the coming years.

The work used internet sources, it was based on interviews of experienced professionals in the field, on newspaper articles, on data of bank reports and archives of statistical services and services of the municipality.
